Safeguarding Adults Statement

Advocacy in Greenwich believes that everybody has the right to live safely and not be hurt.

Everyone should be treated well and be able to make choices.

Abuse is when a person harms another person. If someone hurts you or scares you it is wrong.

If you think that you are being abused you can talk to your advocate, a family member, a friend or a worker.

Advocacy in Greenwich has a Safeguarding Adults Policy. This explains about types of abuse and how to stop it.

The policy tells staff, volunteers and student advocates what they must do if they are worried that someone is being abused.

If we are worried that you are being abused we will do something about it. We will talk to you first if we can.

Some types of abuse are against the law and the police could stop it from happening and keep you safe.

The Director, Anita Rickard, is the person responsible for safeguarding at Advocacy in Greenwich.
